

The origin of life is one of the most important questions that answer will give us an understanding of who we are and will open the door to a better understanding of the Universe. The importance of this knowledge makes it very attractive for most religious and political groups to use it for their own agenda and purpose. It is important to understand the origin of life, but it is also good to know the facts surrounding the origin of the theory that explains the origin of life. Will be revealing if we find out that there is some inexplicable financial generosity toward the creator of this theory. This will be a sign of possible third-party intervention and possible inserted agenda that will serve the interests of some institution, organization, or authority. Let's see what the facts will tell us:

It is interesting to find that the most popular theory for the origin of life, promoted by the media as "the most credible" and most "scientific," comes from a person who "mysteriously" was awarded the rare privilege of having a privately funded scientific expedition by ship around the world. Probably you have already guessed who this person is – Charles Darwin.

They always portray this man as an old and wise man... but why?

This is a remarkable story because the details are shocking! Every intelligent person will start to worry when learns that Charles Darwin was only a 22-year art student with no formal education in biology when he was appointed to be the head of a four-year scientific expedition around the World. – I will repeat it again! – 22-year-old – (not biologist), but art student becomes head of the scientific biological expedition! In order to hide this shocking fact, Darwin always is portrayed as an "old and wise" man (as in the picture above). We know another similar "coincidence" where Niels Bohr, the author of another fundamental doctrine - the "Copenhagen Interpretation of Physics" (which acts as a dead end of Physics) was also privately funded. It is a reasonable question - How and why he had his own privately funded Institute of Physics? Throughout history, only Aristotle has had the privilege to have his own institute of philosophy because he was a tutor of Alexander the Great. After that, nobody else from the scientific community in the past and present has had the luxury of such generous funding.

We learn also, that the mother of Einstein has been a housekeeper of the richest Jewish banker in Switzerland – Rotchild. This “family” connection explains how the second-class patent clerk was promoted to the status of “genius” despite that his theory is a bunch of conflicting claims that do not explain anything!

The outcome of private “generosity” was the production of the two most important theories for our understanding of the world – The Origin of the Universe and the Origin of Life. It is a striking “coincidence”, that both - the Big Bang and the Evolution Theory are using the same method to “prove” their version of the origin of the world and the origin of life – they are working backward in time and by ignoring fundamental principles and evidence they are constructing their false and impossible fundamental assumptions.

For example:

They come with “genius” assumptions that the entire Universe comes out from “Nothing” and that life arises spontaneously in a “pool of mud”. - Such assumptions have no relation to science but to incredible stupidity! Also - it is a widely held opinion that Darwin is the author of the idea of the adaptive “evolution” of species, but this is wrong. At the time of the publication of his papers, the scientific community had a good understanding and enough evidence for the natural process of evolution. For thousands of years, people had bred different domesticated animals and plants using the technique of selection. The claims that Darwin discovered this are absolutely incorrect. The fact is that the young Charles Darwin (22y. old), who studies art and hasn’t been even a biologist was privately funded and sent on HMAS Beagle with a “special” mission. On his return, before he publishes anything he has been promoted to celebrity status by the media, and given a Treasury grant of about $150,000 (present value) to write a book! - These facts are revealing what really stands behind his success “story” because the concept of Darwin's theory is “the survival of the fittest,” which actually postulates that violence is the fundamental principle and reason for the evolution of life and progress of humanity!

This doctrine has been adopted by the Elite and brings us endless wars, suffering, and inequality.

After 23 years in 1859, Charles Darwin finally delivered what he had been paid to deliver - he published the book, “On the Origin of Species.” The main concept of his theory is the assumption that life on Earth has evolved by chance from a mixture of organic compounds in the primordial pool. The assumption is that all living organisms have common ancestors from the past. The evolution of living organisms is done by natural selection by preserving and accumulating minor advantages in mutations of organisms and passing them to the next generations. This preservation of minor advantages enables organisms to compete and adapt better to the natural environment changes.

We should consider very carefully the fundamental concepts in this Theory because they violate the two fundamental principles in biology – The “Minimum Life Complexity” and the principle of “Random Mutations”
The “Minimum Life Complexity” is the necessity of a minimum number of fully developed functioning organs for an organism to exist and function. In short, this means that even the most primitive single cell to be able to function must develop simultaneously at least 20 fully developed, well-functioning, and well coordinated with each other organs. The proposal is that the slow gradual evolution will provide the necessary organs one by one spread part centuries, and millenniums. - Such a scenario is impossible! We have to realize that the most primitive single cell is an incredibly complex biological system – To survive, the single cell must be able to sense the environment, move, find food, process food, expel waste products, and replicate itself. We will consider only one of them with the aim of realizing how complex and specific functions each of these organs must have. – The outer cell membrane for example. The membrane must be water-based and water-resistant. The membrane must be non-penetrative. The membrane must be flexible and provide locomotion. The membrane must have sensors and valves to pass in only the wanted substances (Food) and to block entry of everything else. The membrane must have valves and pumps to expel the waste products.

If the membrane lacks even one of the necessary functions the organism cannot function. The same is valid for all other organs of the single-cell organism. A leading biologist states that even the most primitive biological cell is a well-coordinated chemical laboratory, more complex than any modern chemical factory! On top of this complexity, the single-cell organism must have a program and communication center to coordinate the functions of its system. The single cell also must have a program and system for reproduction. We have to realize, that this complexity must arise and be formed at once - fully functioning with the ability to reproduce itself! Is this possible to happen by chance in a primordial muddy pool? – With all our modern technology we still are not able to produce a living single cell. If we decide to produce only a cell membrane, we will end with computerized machinery the size of a bus! How did the primordial pool of mud manage to squeeze this complex machinery to such a microscopic size? - To find out the truth, we will consider some revealing facts, that the Establishments are hiding very carefully, and only when we get the full picture only then we will get to the conclusion.

Random mutations: From our experience with computers, we know that any random bit of information that comes from the internet and goes into the Windows software we are called a “Virus”. These “Viruses” are always harmful and destructive to our program. If somebody is trying to convince you that by the spontaneous introduction of “Viruses,” your Windows 10 will become better or will “evolve” into Windows 11 or become an extremely sophisticated program you will call him – “Stupid” because the chances of useful viruses against harmful ones are one against trillions on the power of trillions! And the chances of your window becoming more sophisticated by absorbing random “useful” viruses is the same as you playing a “Lottery” and winning repeatedly millions and millions of times with odds of one against trillions, where even one mistake will destroy your program! – Such an explanation an intelligent person will never accept!

And now... we have to come back to our main subject - the origin of life. We have to consider the origin of life on Earth with an open mind and without any prejudice because the origin of life has only two possible scenarios: Spontaneous or... Introduced. Either of these two possibilities needs solid evidence to be accepted as the most credible explanation for the origin of life on planet Earth. It is important to know that the biological life on Earth has a single origin – regardless of whether it is introduced or spontaneous, this has happened only once in the entire history of Earth, and all biological life is related to the primordial single cell and to each other! Darwin is not providing an answer to the question – why the life arise only one time? The big problem is that the biological record and the new understanding of organisms’ true genetics do not support the Darwinian theory of the origin of life. Also, the enormous complexity of a single cell cannot be explained by the spontaneous organizing of chemical compounds into such a highly sophisticated biological system which is the most primitive single cell. Biologists state that the most primitive single cell surpasses the complexity of any modern chemical factory or laboratory. The fact is that the DNA of the most primitive cells surpasses the complexity and sophistication of all software programs on Earth. Darwin proposes that such sophisticated and logically constructed software of biological life can arise spontaneously from the random mixing of chemicals in the primordial pool of water. This is an absurd proposition because DNA is an incredibly sophisticated biological program and random mutations will destroy the functional order of the existing DNA! There also is a huge problem with the discontinuity in the developmental line of the specimens through the past geological periods. According to Darwin, we should observe a gradual and uninterrupted, slow and continuous development of all spicity. The problem is that we not observing gradual development, but stepped patterns in our paleontological record, with sudden appearance and disappearance of fully developed organisms. The claim that the evidence has not been found yet cannot be used as evidence for the correctness of Darwin’s theory. We have a very rich paleontological record from all geological periods, a very good record even for single-cell organisms dating far back to 4.1 billion years ago, but the common ancestor of the complex-cell organisms just is not there! This is a very significant fact that we cannot ignore! We have witnessed in the last 3.8 billion years the continuous existence of primitive bacteria which is not evolving, but we never witnessed any gradual developments of complex-cell organisms, where different colonies of bacteria are transforming themselves gradually into specialized organs with specific body functions.

So... what the truth is?

I will suggest you sit down in your chair and tie up your seatbelt because the following information will shake you to the core and will turn upside down everything you have been taught about the origin of life and the Universe. I want to make it clear! - I am not promoting anything! I don't want you even to believe me! – I want you only to check the validity of the facts which I am presenting and to use your own judgment to make sense of these facts! – I want you to make sense of and have the courage to make your logical conclusion no matter how bizarre the result will be!

I will start with the finding of biologists that life on Earth has a common origin. What does this mean? – This means that the cells of our body, the cells of every plant, animal, and single bacteria are virtually the same. The cells have different functions, but the basic structural pattern is the same – (Eucaryotes) – For example, we are developing from “Stem Cells” which by the instructions of the DNA are forming different organs, but the cells are the same!

I have to admit that will be logical to assume that the early appeared single cells have evolved into more complex organisms. This is logical, but life is full of surprises and we first have to see the facts, consider them carefully, and then jump to a conclusion.

It is well-known that the first appeared bacteria on Earth still exist to the present day without significant changes. These bacteria are forming the life support system of the biological life on the planet and if they evolve, the so-called “Food Chain” will collapse. These bacteria are transforming the Earth from lifeless rock into a well-balanced biological system. The bio-system of Earth is supported by these bacteria and thanks God these bacteria look like are “designed” not to evolve! – The question is why? Why these bacteria are not evolving in the last 4 billion years? – This is a significant fact in our jigsaw puzzle, which we will live open for the moment with the hope that it will fit in the picture later on.

Now we will consider the complexity of DNA because DNA is a sophisticated logically constructed informational order. - DNA is the program of life! According to the Theory of Evolution everything must start from primitive forms and gradually increase its sophistication and form more complex and sophisticated organisms including DNA – isn't it?

The answer is definitely NO! - It is exactly the opposite!

This is the first major shock in our consideration which clashes violently with the established narrative of evolution. How come? This doesn't make sense?... Don't be so fast! – It will make perfect sense later.

The complexity and sophistication of DNA are measured by the length of the molecule, and its base pairs. Human DNA contains approximately 3 billion base pairs. Surprisingly, we are using only a small fraction of our DNA - about 2% only! The rest 98% is called “Junk” DNA. Modern science has no good understanding of the presence and potential functions of such a vast amount of unused DNA. (We will remember this and also will live aside this fact until it fits in the picture).

Scientists are puzzled by the fact that the quantity and sophistication of the DNA are in the reverse sequence to the sophistication of organisms. - This is not an isolated incident, but it is everywhere! It is a trend where the more ancient and primitive organisms have the most complex and sophisticated DNA package.

I will start with Humans – we regard ourselves as the most advanced organisms on our planet with the largest brains and logical and abstract thinking, but we have “only” 3 billion base pairs in our DNA.

Compared to humans, The Onion has 5 times more DNA – about 16 billion base pairs. We have to ask ourselves: According to the Theory of Evolution, the only scenario for the Onion to have such a sophisticated package of DNA is for the Onion to have been a more advanced organism than us in the past and for some mysterious reason to devolve to its present primitive state. We know that the Onion never had been a more advanced organism than humans and the scenario of the Theory of Evolution does not provide the origin of its sophisticated DNA package. So... the question is who is wrong, nature, or the Theory of Evolution? We know that Nature cannot be wrong!

Ok, this was only one example and if it is an isolated case, we cannot make fundamental assumptions from it, but if this trend is continuing and is widespread then we cannot ignore it and have to start looking for an answer.

Here are the next examples:

The small salamander - called Axolotl. It is very ancient spiky – something between fish and land animals. It is famous for its incredible ability to regenerate severed limbs and organs. Such ability is a result of Axolotl's enormous package of DNA - it has 32 billion base pairs of DNA, which is 10 times more than the human package of DNA. So... what is making the difference? Why humans cannot re-generate missing organs? – I suspect that when our body is forming, the stem cells are screening the DNA and allowing only DNA with specific functions to form different organs. In this way, our body is losing the information and ability to re-grow missing organs. We don't have to be unhappy with this outcome, because the narrow specialization makes the different organs function in a more responsive and efficient way.

Axolotl

The next example is the ancient three Ginkgo Biloba. It appears in the geological strata about 290 million years ago. The three have about 41 billion base pairs, which is 13 times more DNA than humans. This huge package of DNA is giving this tree a very interesting ability. In scientific research in China, a 600-year-old Ginkgo Biloba tree has been studied and the scientists didn't find any sign of aging. On top of this surprising ability, the three have very complex antibacterial properties, which makes these trees very resilient survivors. Chinese medicine uses leaf extract to treat various health conditions.

Ginkgo Biloba

The champion in the plant world is the plant called – Paris Japonica This plant is classified to be in the Fern family, which is one of the first living plants on Earth. It has 159 billion base pairs and the length of a single strain of DNA stretches up to 91 meters! This is 50 times larger than human DNA.

The Paris Japonica is a very slow-growing plant. The biologists state that the slow growth is a result of the enormous package of DNA, which is taking time to be replicated in the growing new cells. – It looks like the enormous package of DNA not always is an advantage, but is acting as a heavy load to the organism. - This is very useful information that can give us a clue about the mechanism that organisms are using for survival.

Paris Japonica

And now is the time to revile the ultimate champion of DNA sophistication on Earth –

As I stated at the beginning – hold on to your chair because a huge surprise is coming! –

The organism with the most sophisticated package of DNA is one of the most primitive ancient single-cell amoebas called – Polychaos Dubium. It has 670 billion base pairs of DNA, which is 220 times larger than human DNA. In these single cells organisms is stored 400 meters of DNA! The amoebas are single-cell organisms from the class of Eukaryote bacteria which appear - 2.2by ago.

How the Evolution Theory can explain the presence of the most sophisticated package of DNA in the most ancient organisms on the Earth? It is important to understand that:

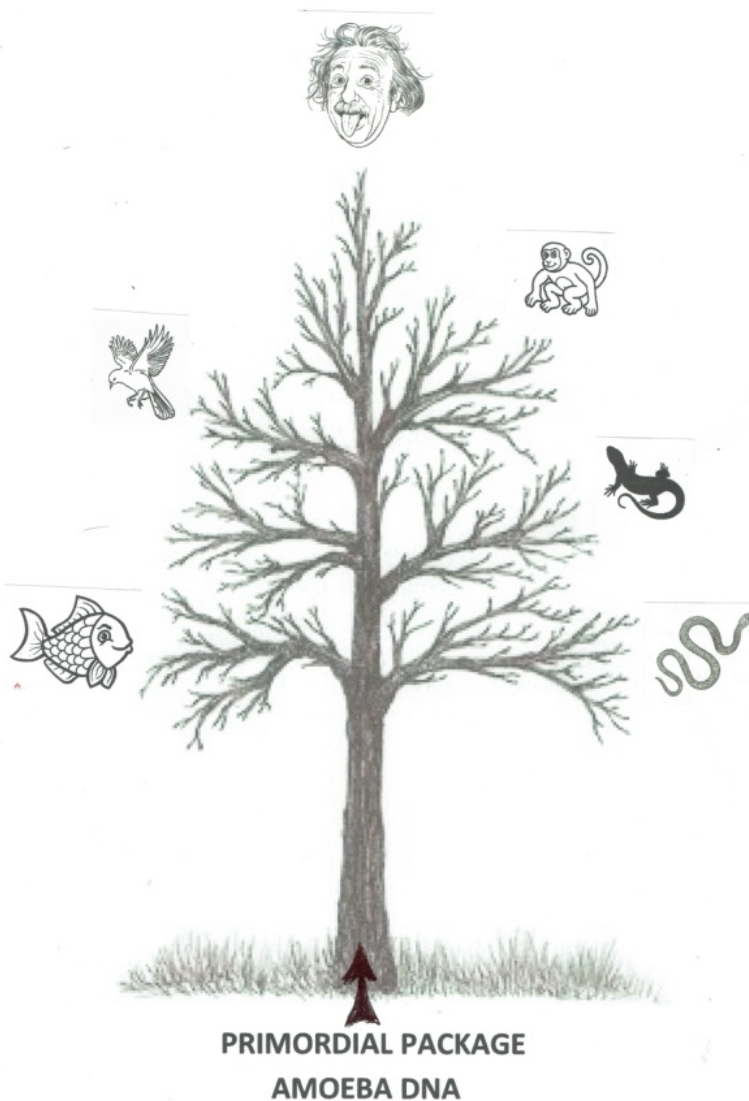

Polychaos Dubium

Eukaryote is the first single-cell organism that contains a nucleus and DNA, which appeared about 2.2 billion years ago. All life on Earth - plants, algae, fungi, and animals are made from eukaryote cells.

And now the most important question is: - Eukaryote bacteria appear suddenly (from nowhere) without any sign of predecessors or slow evolution because it is 15,000 larger than the existing bacteria called Prokaryotes, which do not have nuclei and DNA at all! So... Eukaryotes cannot evolve from Prokaryotes and Eukaryotes possess incredibly sophisticated DNA which cannot evolve spontaneously – This exactly is the smoking gun! - This is the most revealing fact that tells us that the only option and credible scenario is that life on Earth has been introduced!... But hang on; There are more surprises to come:

A study a few years ago produced a very surprising result. – Scientists put plants in a difficult environment and observe how the plants will react to the newly introduced challenges.

Scientists have found that most plants have died, but a few of them manage to survive. The surprising result was that the surviving plants shade off (dumping) some existing functions in order to concentrate on the functions that they need to survive. For example – the plants, which has been planted in the shade of the forest canopy stop producing side branches and put all the effort into growing up and reaching the sunlight. Plants put in dry environments stop growing and start developing large root systems. In this situation, the plants have no time to invent and develop new functions. They simply get rid of the unwanted functions and pull out from their “Junk” DNA-ready useful functions. This study sheds light on the puzzle of why primitive organisms have more DNA than advanced organisms. – Because the process of sophistication turns out to be in the exact opposite of the Darwin proposal. We found that the most sophisticated package of DNA is in the first single cell. Every time, when a particular organism faces an obstacle, this organism dumps the unwanted functions (parts of DNA) and gets new and more appropriate functions from its package of “Junk” DNA. In this way, the organisms are finding quickly new functions that help them to adapt and survive a rapidly changing environment. By pulling out new good functions some organisms manage to survive; the others, which are pulling out wrong functions, perish! Finally, we have in front of us the facts, which make sense and explain every detail of the appearance, progress, and sophistication of the biological life on planet Earth. The picture below is a visual explanation of how the advancement of biological life works. On the bottom is the primitive single cell – the amoeba, which has been used for the introduction of life on Earth. In this single cell has been inserted an enormous package of DNA. In this package is included an endless possibility of different forms of biological organisms.

Once life has been introduced it has been left alone the nature to take its course. How does this work? - Different cells fall into different environments which form their body shape and body functions. That's how in the soil the worms are adopted, in the water the fish is thriving, on the land the grazing animals are dominant and the birds take to the air. Living organisms are dumping unwanted parts of DNA and going in their chosen specific way - (Their specific branch of the tree of life). Every time the organism needs to adapt to environmental challenges, every time it dumps out some parts of DNA and pulls out from its reserve new functions. In this way, the package of DNA slowly, but gradually is getting smaller and smaller. This is the reason why advanced organisms have less DNA than the more ancient and primitive life forms. For the expenses of DNA, the organisms are gaining better body functions, which are superior for some particular tasks. But don't be alarmed; whoever designed the primordial package of DNA has done an incredibly good job. In this package are included nearly endless possibilities of life forms. For example, after 4 billion years of advancing and dumping unwanted parts of DNA, we humans have achieved incredible body sophistication. - We cannot dream of having a better body for our tasks and way of life. We can swim, dive, climb mountains, walk in the Desert, and live in extremely cold conditions. We can survive on any type of food and even we are relatively smart! We have to realize, that this is not the end of our sophistication, because we are using only 2% of our DNA and we have in reserve another 98% of it. Can you imagine how far and sophisticated we, humans can become if we don't erase ourselves out of existence?

Somebody will ask the logical question – How in the last 2.2 billion years the original package of DNA is not corrupted and all living organisms are enjoying perfect functioning DNA? Having in mind that the Universe probably is much, much older than the Big Bang Theory is proposing this question of preservation of correct and functioning DNA is very important. Biologists state that DNA is eternal. - The mechanism of replication of DNA is extremely accurate and there are multiple cross-checking mechanisms to prevent corruption from passing to the new cells. There is one more safeguard built by “Nature” - the sexes of species. When the new organism is forming it takes the DNA from two parents and if in one individual some parts of DNA are damaged due to external factors such as sickness, radiation, or poisoning, the embryo has a mechanism to choose and select the healthy parts of DNA from both parents. Humanity has known this for a long time and that's why marriages between family members were not allowed by tradition, the Law, and Religions. The dream of scientists is to find a way to bring back to life the extinct animals. I will tell them that this is not a dream, because in the packaged DNA of Polychaos Dubium is stored the DNA information of every organism that ever lived on Earth. Scientists must learn to read and decode DNA and there is an endless pool of information for nearly unlimited possibility of different body shapes and structures. Can we become capable of producing such a variety of new and old organisms? I am not sure, because this requires an intelligent approach.

First, we need to have the courage to admit the truth! - If all the evidence is pointing toward introduced life, we have to have the courage to admit it. The most likely scenario is that the life on Earth has been seeded and managed by Extraterrestrial Super-Intelligence. We have to take notice of some events of the past and realize that life on Earth has been carefully guided. The evidence for this is the bacteria that are not evolving. The next is the “Cambrian Explosion” – the sudden appearance of 600 different types of organisms. The next is the well-known targeted or “selective” extinction of Dinosaurs 65 my ago, where the mammals were unaffected. Also 12,800 years ago we are observing another targeted extinction of the mega-fauna where the other species were unaffected. We are observing also Intervention in human development. Many groups such as Homo Erectus, Homo Florentientis, Neanderthals, Cromagnions, Denisovans, Australopithecus, and on... and on... have disappeared. The recent significant events are the destruction of Sodom and Gomorra and the sinking of the entire continent of the corrupt civilization of Atlantis. About 12,800y ago our memory of the past has been erased and humanity was forced to start from zero.

The most important conclusion is: - If life on Earth cannot arise spontaneously, this also is valid for Extraterrestrial life in the Universe.

It is time to realize that life in the Universe has been created in the same way as everything else! – Biological life is a part of the “Grand Design” of the Universe, where the intelligent mind is the apex of all structures. The Universe is designed with logic and purpose in every aspect. We have to find the purpose of our existence and realize, that there are Eternal Universal Principles, which we cannot continue ignoring! With great sadness, I have to say that - Society, which rejects the truth, burns books, kills, tortures, and imprisons its most valuable individuals, rejects reason, and embraces nonsense, corruption, and immorality has no future!
